Niamh's Next Step Children's Cancer Charity

On Sunday 20th May 2012 our hearts broke and lives changed forever when our beautiful, brave little girl lost her 18 month battle with Neuroblastoma, aged 5. Niamh passed away peacefully in her mummy and daddy's arms. We miss her more than we could ever explain but are so proud of the way she touched so many peoples hearts and the legacy she has left behind. We have set up this charity in Niamh's memory in the hope of helping other families fighting this vile childhood cancer.

Help us Fight Neuroblastoma

Neuroblastoma is an aggressive cancer that mainly affects children. Around 100 children are diagnosed with Neuroblastoma each year in the UK of which only around 30% will survive. There is currently NO government or NHS funding to research this vile cancer that is killing our children. Every penny raised by Niamh's Next Step goes directly towards funding vital research. To date, with your support we have committed over 200K into funding life saving research projects but there is still a long way to go!
